

Marine Corps Ammo is changing

Published 4/24/2012

Marine Corps Ammo is changing

POM 14 budget planning is well underway and PM AMMO is beginning to prepare for a sharp down turns in funding across the ammunition commodity. After many years of large ammunition budgets and OCO funding the Marine Corps has billions of dollars of ammunition in the pipeline that still has not arrived. With expected reductions in training and a small Marine Corps it is reasonable to believe that the requirements will be less. A large concern for the Marine Corps will be the survivability of the critical munitions industrial base if there should be a large down turn in ammunition procurements across the FYDP 2013-2018.

